Winter In Western Europe

The season's first snow has fallen in western Europe—a war story more sobering to those privileged to stay at home than all other war news from that front.

Realization is spreading among us that this already is a long war. Many men now have been away from home more than two years. Some have been in service for three years, a few for more than three years. It is probable that five years will have passed before some of them come home.

These are the things sweethearts, wives and families of service men think of as winter descends on Europe. The effects of war, the dislocations and separations it brings, have been felt less in the United States than in the other warring nations, yet even here they are piling up a mountainous burden of tragedy and heartache. It is not merely war that human beings are resolving to outlast. They are resolved there must be no petition of families torn apart, treasures destroyed, no repetition of countless thousands of men bearing wounds, no more military cemeteries, no more refugees for the care of the maimed and the crippled whose lives were ruined through no individual fault of theirs.

Every war becomes, in time, a kind of routine, but civilized men never harden themselves to the suffering left in its wake, nor think without pain of the aching hearts and loneliness war brings to men and women and children who ask only the right to live together happily. The season's first snow has fallen in western Europe . . . and may spring be not far behind.

Right Makes Might

Addition of the French provisional government to the advisory commission for dealing with Europe after the war, like the inclusion of China in the council of major powers, marks a key premise in the plans which Allied governments are making for post-war security.

It is the premise that right makes might, a reversal of the contrasting premise used by power politics throughout history—that might alone makes right. France is not now a major power, though it is to be encouraged to become one. Nor is China, its counterpart in Asia, a major power. Yet, it is the apparent judgment of the major powers in existence—the United States, Great Britain and Russia—that China should be encouraged to become stronger than it is.

In the long view, the obvious plan is to replace Germany and Japan as major powers today with France and China as major powers tomorrow, because they have earned the right to be so constituted by valiant resistance to Axis designs for world domination. Whatever skepticism may be aroused now by the present state of the French and Chinese is balanced by hope that their problems somehow may be solved and their influence expanded. It is the Allied answer to the power politics of the Axis, which contemplated domination of weak satellite states by Germany and Japan as the sole trustees of world power. It is a thesis of responsibility for world security divided five ways, instead of two, with a parallel thesis that small states should share in decisions on the means of security, though not themselves possessed of those means. Tentative though the idea seems to be at this faltering stage, it embodies all the highest ideals of the nations now in the process of accepting responsibility for international security.

Political Mathematics

Herbert Brownell, Jr., chairman of the Republican national committee, has made this timely reminder to those calling the election results a landslide: that if the solid south is subtracted from the Democratic majority, the remainder is perilously close—about a million and a quarter votes. Furthermore, a shift of a few more than 300,000 votes outside the solid south, in 13 states, would have given Gov. Dewey enough additional electoral votes to carry the election. In some cases, states were carried for the Democratic candidate by less than one-half of one per cent.

No one argues, of course, that close ones count in politics. There would be no doubt in reciting political mathematics, except for the likelihood that the people of this country will be encouraged to believe that the New Deal has been voted back into power by a landslide mandate of the people. There is no evidence of that nature available in political mathematics.

Indeed, as the election recedes and begins to permit perspective, there is rather significant evidence that Mr. Roosevelt's political managers may claim a landslide to conceal the fact the election, measured by political mathematics instead of ballyhoo, was too close for comfort. They won the popular vote and the electoral majority, thanks to the solid south and their city organizations, but they won no mandate, except to prosecute the war.

The Legion To The Fore

It was the American Legion's mistortune during peacetime years to have the public judge its activities by the antics of its annual convention. Their quieter, constructive work in the fields of welfare and citizenship were overlooked.

Now, with the war mounting toward victory, the Legion is assuming a dominant place in reconversion and rehabilitation plans. It drafted and sponsored the so-called "GI Bill of Rights". It is interesting itself in helping disabled men to find work, and it has made the wise suggestion that a World War II veteran be appointed to each draft board to assist the other members in finding re-employment for other veterans. The fact that 300,000 veterans of this war have already joined the Legion speaks well for its prestige and appeal. The further fact that the Legion has overhauled its public relations system promises a better public understanding of its efforts. All these things suggest that the reinforced American Legion will fulfill its potentialities as a strong and active democratic group during the difficult days to come.

Petrillo's Victory

Commenting on the final settlement of the 27-month ban on recordings and transcriptions which his union enforced on those industries, James Caesar Petrillo, union president, called it the "greatest victory for a labor organization in the history of the labor movement". That is almost an understatement.

He tied up an important industry so completely that the spokesmen for its principal units admitted they had no choice but to go out of business or pay the more than $4,000,000 a year demanded by Petrillo. He openly defied a government agency, WLB, and when it passed responsibility to President Roosevelt he defied a presidential order to lift the union's ban.

Anyone who claims Mr. Petrillo hasn't presided over a great victory will have to make a couple of giant corporations, a government agency and Mr. Roosevelt eat their words to prove it.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, November 16.

A FAIRLY active and progressive day is read from the ruling astral positions which indicate that best results and benefits may be made by a tactful and clever affiliation with large organizations or corporations, in which secret agreements or understandings seem to assist to safer objectives. Subtlety, shrewdness, possible intrigue or use of personal prestige or even charm or magnetism, may assure desired hopes and wishes, if certain obstacles or delays seem to frustrate. Be not carried away by ideals or impulses. Keep practical, and adhere to duty and obligations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly successful and pleasant year, in which their best interests may prosper by use of the personal, social, dramatic or subjective approach rather than the stern and sordid. A gracious yielding, or subtle contacts with those in high influence in fraternal, diplomatic, political or secret bodies, may bear unusual fruit. Intrigue, charm, glamour, as well as ideals and beauty have force against matter of fact barriers or impediments, use such with discretion.

A child born on this day should have creative ability and exceptional personality, attaining its success by grace, charm or possible intrigue or subtle measures.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

The Young Soldier

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE ARE told that the induction of 18-year-olds into the army will probably continue for some time. Therefore we folks at home must be prepared indefinitely for the inevitable complaints of the new soldier who has to get used to his strange environment.

Most of his problems are medical, certainly if we include psychology in medicine.

Some of my women folks who have just begun to meet the returning member of the armed forces seem surprised that he is so often full of gripes and "reseniments". But it would not have surprised Alexander the Great or Hannibal, or Joshua. It is as natural for a soldier to gripe as it is for a pony to buck the first time he gets a bridle.

Fundamental Causes

The fundamental causes are very much the same in the two cases. The soldier is put in an entirely new environment. He is made to get up in the morning and every morning. He is told to go "thither and he goeth, or else. This naturally grinds the independent, proud spirit of the free born American who has been laying around in bed until he is darn well pleased to get up and went thither only under the pressure of hunger or love.

The army psychiatrists are doing a good job of trying to help out the adjustments that must be made by deliberately talking over the problems with the new inductee. The old time theory of the hard boiled drill sergeant was to let 'em gripe; they were going to do what he told them anyhow and if they gripped they gripped. But the idea is that they will make better soldiers if they see the whole situation in perspective. It is not an attempt to soften them but to make them reasonable human beings.

The boy who first gets in the army has been torn away from several things precious or at least familiar, to him. There are, of course, all kinds of boys. There is the boy who wants to run away from home either because he is unhappy at home or the adventures of the great world make more of an appeal to him. The army is a great place for such a guy, but he is in the minority.

Most of the men in the army are either homesick or they have been separated from their girl, or they have given up a job, or they are parted from their friends. They know that what they are doing is temporary and does not fit them for life. In short, is a waste of time.

precious time. All this is perfectly natural and normal. As is also the fear that the thought of the danger they are about to encounter has on them.

This leads to resentment. That is a short word for a very complicated set of emotions. But an emotion just the same. In all of us about half our mental life, at least, is emotions. The rest is in the think-box and this, under normal circumstances, controls the emotions and keeps us on an even keel.

But the soldier's resentment may set him to brooding and the think-box is reduced to a very small insignificant part of his life. Sooner or later for most of them the think-box begins to get strong again and resumes its normal status. But for some, such adjustment never occurs and the emotions get in the saddle and things go haywire. They may take the form of dyspepsia, or rapid heart, or bowel upsets and that is why they have a medical angle.

But they can be brought under control, just as the colt is broken to the bridle.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. P. S.:—My 12-year-old son was not circumcized at birth. It is too late now?

Answer: No, if there is any indication for it.

T. G.:—What makes my heart skip a beat every fourth or fifth beat? I am 64 years old.

Answer: It is not serious and perfectly normal for a person after 60 years of age.

H. S.:—Is there an operation for opening up the tear duct in the eye?

Answer: Yes, oculists treat these cases successfully, very frequently.

M. S. J.:—My daughter, aged 17, works in a shop where they cut up cardboard and sometimes the fuzz fills the air. Is this harmful to health?

Answer: All the dusty occupations have health hazards, but there are good air cleaning machines devised for this kind of factory. Your city health department should be asked to make an inspection.

W. L.:—I am suffering with gallstones and my physicians have given me a diet which is the reverse of the diet you prescribed for gallbladder. Is there a difference between gallstones and gallbladder?

Answer: If you had read my article carefully you would have realized I said that fat drained the gallbladder by causing it to contract, and that a physician might want to drain the gallbladder, in which case he would prescribe a fat diet. On the contrary if the gallbladder were in a state of stones he would probably want to quiet it down, in which case he would forbid fat. The gallbladder may be inflamed or full of pus without there being any stones.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Things have a way of happening when least expected. The good and the bad, but especially the bad. I was in a particularly good mood that day. Having disposed of my daily chores faster than usual, I decided to surprise Mickey by coming over early. But the moment she opened the door, I saw something was wrong.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

She didn't answer me, so I followed her into the living room. Don was there, sprawled in an armchair. His face was flushed and it was obvious that I'd interrupted an argument. I glanced from him back to Mickey.

"For Pete's sake!" I said. "Why doesn't someone talk?"

Mickey came close to me, fighting back tears.

"Suppose when," she asked, "do businessmen need bodyguards?"

"I said," I said.

Mickey strode over to her brother with a fierceness which I'd never suspected. She jerked open his coat. For a moment he tried to resist, but she cowed him with a slap in the face. Strapped under his coat was a brand-new leather shoulder holster with a gun in it.

"For Mr. Boggio's protection," Mickey said. "Tell him about it. Don, in case he doesn't know."

At first the kid was sullen and refused to talk. But prodded by Mickey he finally started. What he had to say was an earful.

About a week ago Boggio had asked him if he was interested in doubling his salary. At first Don had thought he was kidding but Boggio soon convinced him he was on the level. If Don would learn to handle a gun he'd get him a license and he could add the job of bodyguard to that of driver. Quite a number of people, Boggio explained, employed bodyguards. The President of the United States, millionaires, movie stars, and many others.

So Don had agreed to practice marks in a shooting gallery, and finally Boggio had been satisfied with his marksmanship and given him the gun. It was all on the level, the gun was registered in Don's name, and there was nothing illegal about his carrying it. True to his promise, Boggio had given him the raise and he'd come home to tell Mickey about it, expecting her to be delighted. Wouldn't I explain to her that she had nothing to worry about?

Such a degree of innocence bowled me over.

I thought for a moment, then sat down on the arm of Don's chair.

"Look," I said. "I'm going to give you some good advice. Tell Mr. Boggio you've thought it over and changed your mind. You don't want the job. But don't tell him you talked to me."

He was stubborn. "Why shouldn't I want that job? I've been doing all right. And now I'm going to do even better."

"I'm not asking you," I said. "I'm telling you. You'll quit that job and I'll get you another."

But there was no ordering Don around now. I'd always considered him as an overgrown kid who, despite his size, could be made to do as he was told. Apparently the easy dough had already changed him. If there was something wrong with that job, I should tell him what. Wasn't I Boggio's attorney? Didn't I work for him, too? And if I did, why couldn't he? Then he grabbed his hat and coat and walked out.

A long and painful silence followed. I was the one to break it.

"I'm sorry, Mickey."

She was standing near the window, pretending to look out. Her silence was becoming unbearable.

"I said I'm sorry. Why don't you answer?"

She still didn't look around.

"Sorry!" she repeated. Her voice was so tense and low that I didn't sound like Mickey. "Sorry for what? For having got Don mixed up in something he doesn't understand?"

Slowly she walked away from the window and dropped in an armchair. She leaned her head against the back. There was a weary apologeticness in every line of her body.

"Who is this Mr. Boggio? And what does he do?"

I tried to stall.

I brought up the matter of professional ethics. A lawyer couldn't discuss his clients' affairs. Being a lawyer was like being a priest. People told you things you couldn't repeat.

Then I realized I'd as good as admitted that Mickey's suspicions about Boggio were justified, so I quickly backed down. There was nothing wrong with Boggio. At most he was a crank, a wealthy old guy with a persecution complex. And the reason I'd objected to Don taking that bodyguard job was merely because I knew he could do better than dedicate his future to Boggio's vague fears.

She didn't look at me, but kept her gaze fixed on the carpet. I couldn't tell if I was making any headway or not. So I went on afraid to stop for fear the momentum would be lost. And all the time I talked I knew how phony it sounded. But somehow I was still clinging to the hope that she'd believe me. Encouraged by her silence, I took her hands. Maybe the physical contact would bridge this awful gulf between us.

And then at last she looked up. Her hands were still in mine but they were limp. However, the expression in her eyes was eloquent enough. I was out short. I just couldn't continue dishing out lies.

HEALTH QUIZ

Do you have poor digestion? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you feel headachy after eating? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you get sour or upset easily? ☐ YES ☐ NO
Do you feel tired—listless? ☐ YES ☐ NO

Do you feel headachy and upset due to poorly digested food? To feel cheerful and happy again your food must be digested properly.

Each day, Nature must produce about two pints of a vital digestive juice to help digest your food. If Nature fails, your food may remain undigested, leaving you headachy and irritable.

Therefore, you must increase the flow of this digestive juice. Carter's Little Liver Pills increase this flow quickly — often in as little as 30 minutes. And you're on the road to feeling better.

Don't depend on artificial aids to counteract indigestion — when Carter's Little Liver Pills aid digestion after Nature's own order. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills as directed. Get them at any drugstore. Only 10¢ and 25¢.

Stricken Boy Will Have Christmas Party Early

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 15. — There isn't much time left. That's why Nubbins will have his Christmas party Sunday.

Three-year-old Forest "Nubbins" Hoffman has an incurable kidney disease, so his father, Marshall F. Hoffman, decided to move the holiday celebration up to Sunday "because the doctor says Nubbins won't be with us for Christmas."

It's out of season for Christmas trees, but the park commission, when it heard of Hoffman's problem, cut a branch off one of its large evergreens.

Nubbins is looking forward to a very fine Christmas party.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — The Capital looked today to the possibility of the nation's greatest peace-time export program in history as well as to pledges of bi-partisan support for the building of a lasting peace.
President Roosevelt is expected to ask Congress early in 1945 to authorize government-private financial support for exports which may total $15,000,000,000 in the first year after the German collapse. This approximates the nation's present annual export volume, most of it lend-lease.
Current planning calls for government loans only when private capital is not interested and only for useful productive enterprises.
Republican congressmen are being asked to back a proposed constitutional amendment permitting a simple majority of both houses to ratify treaties.

Within three weeks the nation will know whether the Pearl Harbor leaders are to be exonerated or tried by courts martial, say authoritative congressional sources. Action based on the findings of an Army-Navy board investigation of the Pearl Harbor attack will be taken before Dec. 7, when the statute of limitations governing prosecutions in the attack will expire, said one well-informed source who declined to be identified.

President Roosevelt will have a back porch inauguration Jan. 20 for his fourth term. A simple White House ceremony, he believes, will save more than $20,000 in inauguration expenses. For his first three terms Mr. Roosevelt took the oath at the Capitol.

Changes in laws regulating expenditures and Congress' free mail privileges are suggested by Senators Hatch (D., N. M.) and Green (D., R., N. H.) and Rep. Anderson (D., N. M.). Hatch said today the $3,000,000 limit on national political campaign committee spending should be increased. Anderson, chairman of the house campaign investigating committee, suggested barring "political use" of the free mail privilege.

A senate sub-committee meets today to consider whether the $421,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway project requires a formal treaty with Canada. The President said at his news conference yesterday he believed it could be carried out by treaty or by legislation.

LEAVES FROM A WAR CORRESPONDENT'S NOTEBOOK

IN OCCUPIED GERMANY, One reason the American troops have such a firm grip on this corner of Hitler's garden patch is the high quality teamwork which enabled one comparatively small military force to destroy 77 Nazi pillboxes in three days of steady assault.

They were put out of commission when Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' U.S. First Army was breaching the Siegfried line northwest of Aachen. The force which knocked out this network of steel and concrete fortifications, designed originally to hold out for months and years against sledgehammer attacks, consisted of no more than 34 medium tanks, 17 light tanks, four tank destroyers, 1,200 doughboys and 200 engineers.

Their success illustrates anew how well trained and veteran tank troops have taught Germany's tired supermen new lessons in blitz warfare.
"I didn't know myself how good our boys were," said one tank officer, a veteran of three campaigns. "Of course we caught them off balance, but they should have been able to hold these positions for years at least." Yet, they quickly were smashed and broken.

Test of Coordination
How this was accomplished remains a miracle to their own leaders, but the doughboys, tankmen and engineers — who did the job under the heaviest German artillery bombardment undergone by American troops in this war — know it was a result of bedrock battle coordination. Each man's life hung on his faith that the man next to him would perform his task as well as himself.

"That artillery was the worst thing we had to wade through," said Lt. Joe Harper, McAlester, Okla. "They even dropped it on their own pillboxes while we were attacking them, knowing the shells wouldn't go through all that concrete."
"I was in one pillbox that the Germans hit three times with high explosive shells and not a single piece of shrapnel got through."
Before the troops began the actual assault, they were given maps, showing the exact position of every pillbox in their territory and they knew in advance roughly what they could expect.
These Second Armored division veterans knew better than to storm

Q—Was military service compulsory during the Civil War?
A—Yes, but a man could be excused by paying the government $300.

Q—When did the first demonstration of radio control of machinery take place?
A—In 1898, when Nikola Tesla, Yugoslav scientist employed by Edison, demonstrated a radio-controlled boat. Radio was then two years old.

Q—What war-vital materials do the Japs get from British Malaya?
A—Tin, tungsten, iron ore, manganese ore, wood, rubber, among others.

Q—What was the first method of lighting streets in America?
A—A lamp in the window of every seventh house, a method still in use around 1750.

Q—What is stearite?
A—A mineral twin of face powder and talc; used for insulation, crayons, building. It is found in Sardinia, Alabama, North Carolina, Virginia.

Cleanup Proposition
They were divided into highly specialized teams, each unit with a special job to do.

Two assault teams worked with one "cleanup" team. Each assault team consisted of a platoon of medium tanks, a squad of engineers with flamethrowers and a platoon of doughboys.

As one assault team moved up to knock out a pillbox, its companion team opened fire on the flanking pillboxes to keep them occupied. And as soon as the resistance ceased away from any pillbox up came the "cleanup" team to clean it out and take any survivors prisoner.

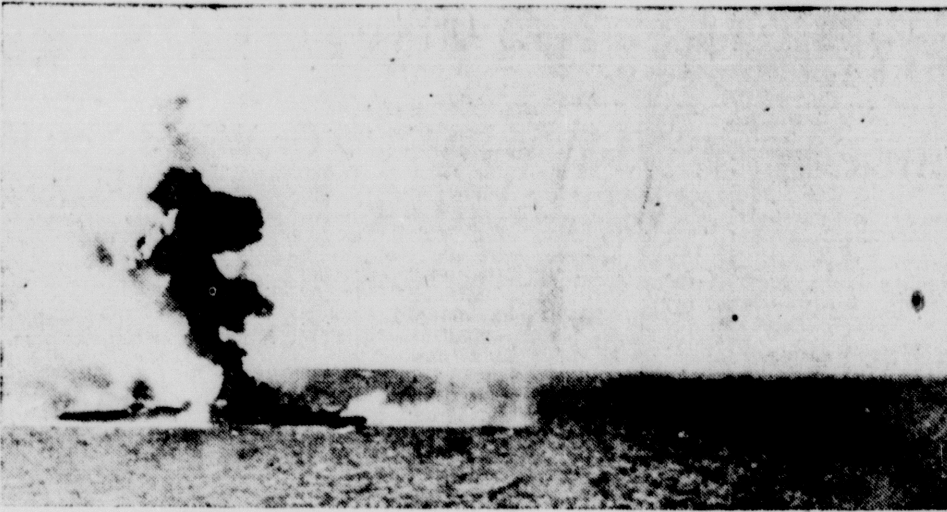

This team consisted of a platoon of light tanks, armed with 37 millimeter guns, a platoon of doughboys and two squads of engineers to blow up the pillbox, so the enemy couldn't infiltrate back and use it later.

It was scientific, coordinated fighting of this kind—in which each obstacle was successfully engaged and destroyed—that enabled this one small outfit to wipe out the 77 pillboxes with losses so small that if they were known they would be extremely embarrassing to Nazi military chieftains who built the Siegfried line to withstand any siege.

Always Stop After An Accident, Motor Club Head Advises

Failure to stop after being involved in an accident is a serious offense and the number of "hit-skip" drivers is increasing according to A. P. Morris, manager of the Columbiana County Motor club.

The Ohio law requires drivers involved in accidents to stop and upon request of the injured or other persons, to give his name, address and license of his car. Failure to do so may mean fine and imprisonment. In addition, the registrar of motor vehicles is empowered to revoke the license of the hit-skip driver.

Aside from the provisions of the law, Morris points out, the humanitarian thing to do is to stop and render assistance to those who may be seriously injured. Many persons injured in accidents who died for lack of immediate attention might have lived had they had that attention.

Don't be a hit-skip driver and take a chance on being caught later and charged with manslaughter. Even though you were not at

Yale Heads For An Unbeaten Season With 155-Pound Hero Of Pacific As Blocking Back

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEW YORK — When Harvard, Princeton and others chucked it, Yale carried on with a brilliant young coach, Howie Odell.

And the Elis threaten to finish the third year unbeaten with fellows like Marlin Gher.

Buzzy Gher is singled out because he sticks out as a five-foot, six-inch, 155-pound blocking back who was given to the Bulldog by the fortunes of war.

Gher, 22, spent three years in the Navy before being assigned to Officer Candidate school in New Haven. He was an aerial gunner credited with six Jap Zeros. The survivor of two plane crashes, he was awarded seven citations, including the Distinguished Flying Cross, Presidential and Purple Heart. He was on a dozen combat missions, saw action over Tarawa, Rabaul and Bougainville.

Yale coaches discovered Gher when he bobbed up on the B squad with a bloody nose.

Odell wondered whether the little fellow could old up through an eight-game campaign, but following his experiences in the South Pacific, Gher quickly demonstrated that to him college football was an afternoon off.

Scores First Touchdown
Gher — pronounced Gear — reflects the aggressiveness and spirit of the Odell-driven Elis. In the 22-0 smacking of Rochester—third and three on the 15—he actually dived for the first down, wiggled out of the arms of two tacklers and bounced across the goal line. The remarkable thing is that he regained his feet when he spotted the hole as he dived.

Following the game young Gher had a grin from ear to ear, hugged teammates. A happier kid never lived.

"I played four years in high school and four games with Yale, and that was the first touchdown I ever made," he beamed. "Jeez—what a thrill! Just like bagging my first Jap plane."

Gher is a pocket edition of a battleship. To old-timers, he strikes memories of Tom Shevlin, fabled Blue end of 40 years ago. They believe he hits as hard as Shevlin, who also was a giant.

They get a kick out of the way he barrels in, bowls over huge fullbacks and then reaches down to help them up.

Hasn't Missed a Tackle
A good portion of the Yale defense rests on the small, but cupful and sturdy shoulders of Gher, who resides at Shiremanstown, Pa., near Harrisburg, and attended Mechanicsburg, Pa., high.

Checking the films, Odell finds that in not a single instance where Gher had a chance of any sort to make a tackle did he fail to do so. The V-12 is a devastating tackler.

Yale obtained replacements in time for the Dartmouth game in the way of Fullback Arnold Whittier and guard, Harold Barker of Rochester and guard, Nick Fislili of the Green, who was ready to line up against his former mates.

Yale's luck in the way of Navy and Marine transfers has been as remarkable as their diminutive blocking back, Buzzy Gher.

HORNETS HAVE TRY AT ENDING STREAK

Can End Four-Game Bad Series By Beating Buffalo Tonight

The Pittsburgh Hornets have a chance to end their four-game losing streak in the American Hockey league by beating the championship Buffalo Bisons on the Buffalo ice tonight.

The leaders of the Western division face a difficult task as the Bisons are out to again dangle the Hershey for leadership in the Eastern half of the loop.

Hershey broke the tie last night by whipping the St. Louis Flyers, 4 to 1, at St. Louis.

President Al Sulphur of Cleveland, announced the Barons had purchased Joe Bretto, a defenseman, from the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League. The price was not disclosed.

BUCKS-ILLINI NOT FEATURING OFFENSE

Practices and Records Show Defenses Will Be Big Part of Fracas

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Whatever happens on the greenward of Municipal stadium in Cleveland when Illinois and Ohio State meet Saturday in the midwest's top football game, it won't be one of those "best offense is a good defense" affairs.

Neither Coach Carroll Widdoes of the Buckeyes nor Coach Ray Eliot of the Illini planned to play for a break that might mean a winning touchdown. Both, if the style of drills they held yesterday can be taken as a criterion, will use the "best defense is a good offense" system and go all out to make their own breaks—and touchdowns.

Coach Eliot held a long, hard scrimmage for his Illini yesterday, but neither Buddy Young nor Eddie Bray were present. Young suffered a bruised ankle against Michigan last week, but he is expected to be ready by Saturday. Whether Bray, whose "trick" knee again was hurt, will be able to play was problematical.

Coach Widdoes also had a worry—Fullback Ollie Cline suffering a shoulder injury. As the Buckeyes went through a long offensive drill yesterday, Widdoes said: "Don't count him out of the Illini game yet."

While interest was concentrated on the anticipated fireworks at Cleveland, a sellout crowd was awaiting the 24th renewal of the Northwestern-Notre Dame feud at South Bend.

Northwestern expects to be at full strength, with the possible exception of Tackle Steve Bennett who suffered a head injury last week.

Jumping about Midwestern grids — Purdue worked on defense for its game with Navy.... Indiana also stressed defense against Pitt's attack.... Minnesota practiced new plays for its game with Iowa.... and Iowa began working on a defense against the Minnesota attack.

Michigan, which meets Wisconsin, was stopped by rain.... Chuck Woodard, former Iowa back, was moved into the fullback spot as the Iowa Seahawks prepared for Missouri.

GOLF COURSE FOR EVERY HOSPITAL

That's Aim of PGA After Conferring at Annual Get-Together

By JIMMY JORDAN
CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—A golf course for every military hospital in the United States is the aim of the professional Golfers association.

Impressed with a report on the value of the sport in reconditioning hospitalized servicemen, the PGA unanimously approved the plan and dedicated its 28th annual convention to the project.

The association already has participated in construction of a number of courses at government hospitals, and it was the success of these enterprises, as reported by Capt. Orval Bradford of Thayer General Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., that prompted PGA's approval of the project at closing sessions of its convention yesterday.

Very Helpful
"Golf is of untold value in both physical and mental cases," Capt. Bradford told the delegates. "It is particularly valuable in many types of physical injuries since its tempo can be adjusted to individual cases."

He also explained how the game's natural surroundings and the type of composition involved, is of untold value in various types of war neurosis.

The PGA now will seek approval of the surgeon general and the War department for its program, and hopes to have its members placed in charge.

Funds for construction of the courses and equipment would be raised by member-sponsored tournaments, donations and subscription.

NEW YORK—Wally Schumacher is one of the more remarkable developments of the football season. One year at Cortland State Teachers in upstate New York was the extent of his college career before going into the V-5 program.

At the start of the campaign Lt. Comdr. Glenn Killinger had no idea he'd be playing comparative midgets on the highly recruited North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight School team. Right now, however, he'd be pleased to have 11 Lilliputians—that is, if they performed with the zip and determination of the 150-pound cadet Schumacher.

"Pound for pound I've never seen a better end," says Coach Killinger, the old Penn State luminary.

Otto Graham calls Schumacher one of the finest pass receivers he's played with or against. Schumacher returns the compliment, calls Automatic Otto of Northwestern the greatest passer he's seen.

Fast And A Faker
Being very light, Schumacher is exceptionally fast, and has an uncanny knack of faking defensive backs out of position.

The little cadet from Valley Stream, L. I., almost didn't go out for the team. His lack of size, along with news releases on the expected power of the Cloudbusters, kept him away from the field the first month he was at Chapel Hill.

Then came the urge to take a stab at it.

Schumacher weighed no more than 135 pounds as a high school player. But he is powerfully built, won the Long Island wrestling championship at his weight.

The Cloudbusters were having trouble with the Cherry Point Marines. Schumacher made his appearance midway in the second period and played well defensively.

Following the intermission, with the sailors behind, 7-6, he re-entered the engagement, caught a 26-yard pass thrown by J. T. Levay and picked up four more yards before being hit on the one. Bill Wilson went across for a touchdown.

In the upset of Navy he broke through line and again to break backs for heavy losses.

The Duke game was a repeat performance. With the Blue Devils in the march in the second half, Schumacher threw Durham backs for eight and nine-yard losses on successive plays. In the second period he took a pass from Graham that covered 35 yards in the Cloudbusters' first touchdown drive.

Against Georgia Pre-flight, Schumacher caught a Graham pass that ate up 17 yards and spelled first down on the Skyrockets' 35.

Performance Against Rice Wins Weekly AP Tribute

By TED MEIER
NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Mike Schumchik, Arkansas end, was picked today as the lineman of the week in the seventh weekly Associated Press poll.

Standing 6 ft. 4 inches and weighing 205 pounds, Schumchik won the honor because of his outstanding play against Rice. His feats included overcoming a 10-yard lead to tackle Little George Waldmeyer of Rice after an 86-yard gain; pushing the Rice punter so hard the kick was blocked by another Arkansas player; thus setting up the touchdown that knocked Rice out of first place in the Southwest conference. On defense he played left end. When Arkansas got the ball he switched to right end from where he made several end-around run for good gains.

Schumchik, termed by his Coach Glen Rice the "outstanding player on the field" is the fourth end to be selected for the weekly award. Hank Walker of Virginia; Leon Bramlett of Navy; and Jack Russell of Randolph field are the terminal players previously named.

Frank Lambright, Arkansas guard and Bob "Buster" McClure, Nevada tackle, likewise stood out. Lambright scooped up a Rice fumble and ran 38 yards for a touchdown, then broke up a fourth period Rice threat by intercepting a pass.

Although Nevada lost to the Fleet City (Calif.) Bluejackets, McClure was all over the field in the game played during a snowstorm. Lt. J. J. McLevich, fleet city coach, lauded McClure as "one of the finest college tackles on the West coast."

Harold Watts, Michigan center, who helped whip Illinois by recovering two Illinois fumbles, and Navy's center, Jack Martin, also were

WHAT'S THE PERCENTAGE?
The unfairness in the foul ball rule, Rice says, is that if a batter gets a 50 per cent "piece" of the ball, it's likely to be an easy pop fly, but if he's only two per cent right in his swing and already is charged with two strikes, there's no penalty for the inaccuracy.

HIS ZONE IDEA
What Rice proposes to do about this is to divide foul territory into zones. One zone on each side of the present foul lines would be "free foul" territory into which a batter could hit—not bunt—as many fouls as he wanted without penalty.

The rest of the area would be the "penalty foul" zone and every foul into it would be ruled a strike. And, from his viewpoint, why not even the third one? A batter who can't come closer to a fair hit than a foul behind the plate deserves to perch on the bench.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

he may act as the inspiration of a German underground movement in preparation for another attempt at world conquest.

Mr. Taylor was in a field hospital in France when World War I ended. He remembers how the Germans even then were plotting the present conflagration while outwardly they gave the impression of being whipped. In commenting on the possibility of a hoax, he says Hitler preached for years that if you tell a lie big enough, and repeat it a sufficient number of times, the world will believe it.

"Let's hope," adds Mr. Taylor, "that a repeated German lie may not be accepted as the truth while the Nazi propagandists laugh at us as they did while we remained divided—nationally and internationally—as the Germans conquered nation after nation."

"The press of the Allied world has a duty in this case—a duty we believe it will discharge. That duty is to keep the closest tab possible on the source of the stories regarding Hitler, especially all that appears to be German inspired."

Well, that's something to conjure with. One of the chief Allied aims is to smash Nazism, which represents everything that's evil. Hitler is the heart of this evil which he himself created, and until he is put out of commission it's likely to attract followers.

Whatever may be the solution of the Hitlerian mystery, there's no doubt that the Germans already are looking ahead to another attempt at conquest. Some of them, more arrogant than discreet admit their intentions. They're figuring on fresh aggression a quarter of a century hence. Reliable information from the Orient makes it clear that the Japanese, recognizing their impending defeat, also are preparing for another war against the western powers a generation from now.

The Nazi dictator's fate is indeed a momentous matter.

Indict Sitdown Strikers At Army Objectors Camp

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15—A federal grand jury yesterday indicted two Ohioans, Homer L. Daniel, 44, of Lockland, and William J. Bowen, 22, of Newark, on charges of violating the Selective Service act by allegedly participating in a sit-down strike in a conscientious objectors camp.

Pays Gambling Fine

EAST LIVERPOOL, Nov. 15—A man booked as Thomas Brunt paid a $56 fine in municipal court today on a charge of permitting gambling in what is recognized as the city's largest bingo parlor.

He was the first person arrested since the lid was clamped down last week on so-called public gambling. The ban did not affect bingo playing, however, police said; then, at least four other bingo operators are expected to be arrested in the drive, which has closed blackjack, roulette and dice places.

State Receives Share of Tax On Guns, Ammunition

COLUMBUS, Nov. 15—Ohio's $33,099 share of anticipated 1945 federal excise taxes on guns and ammunition was received yesterday, the state department of conservation and natural resources reported.

General Patton's 3rd Army 95th division is pressing tighter and tighter around Metz, and his 90th division has regained lost Moselle River ground and extended its bridgehead in the Koenigs-macher area. Other 3rd Army forces are supporting the offensive in advances from the Chateau Salins sector.

MAIL EARLY

would arrive long before Christmas.

3—Be sure to address correctly, and wrap all packages securely so as to afford the utmost protection.

4—Mail progressively. That is, do not mail all your Christmas cards and packages the same day but space it out over several days to help avoid confusion at the local postoffice.

As mentioned all Christmas cards should be sent by first-class mail. This is especially important in these days when many people have moved, in which case cards mailed at first-class rates will be forwarded.

Home-Front Morale Factor

"Christmas mail is a morale factor on the home front just as it is overseas. Knowing this, the post-office department is doing all it can to insure all packages and cards arriving at the destination on time.

However, priority must be given to vital war supplies and materials, but any delays in Christmas mail resulting from this priority will be greatly minimized if the public will take our transportation difficulties into consideration when planning their mailings.

"The War department is also reminding us that there are millions of service men and women still stationed in the United States, and these service men and women be remembered in time for Christmas just as those overseas will be remembered.

While the "assistant President" had said he wanted to return to South Carolina and hang up his lawyer's shingle again, Mr. Roosevelt announced yesterday that "Jim" had agreed to stay on as War Mobilization boss until the European war ends.

Some senators viewed this as significant, possibly, of two things:

That any grievance Byrnes may have had as a result of the Democratic national convention has been erased. Byrnes was gunning for the vice-presidential nomination but failed to get the nod from the White House.

Aides say Byrnes, like Hull, is deeply interested in lasting peace and in seeing to it that Roosevelt succeeds where Wilson failed.
